GOLD AND STOCK BULLETIN.

(SPECIAL DESPATCHES TO THE REGISTER.)

New York, Wednesday, Oct. 27—3:30 P. M.

Gold to-day declined 1/4, ruling at 130.

Stocks are dull, but firm. GOVERNMENTS have declined 1/8 to 1/4. Five-twentieths of '62 sold at 120 1/2, a falling off of 1/2.

LONDON, Wednesday, Oct. 27—2:30 P. M.

At the London Stock Exchange this afternoon, United States Bonds were dull, without material change in quotations. Other American securities were more active.

SEE FIRST AND FOURTH PAGES.

Catskill Fire Parade.

The Parade of the Catskill Fire Department is set down for to-day. Rather cool weather for red shirts, unless an overcoat is worn.

Snow Last Night.

Those of our citizens who were out last evening, had the opportunity of witnessing the first fall of snow. Our streets were nearly white this morning, while the Catskills were well covered.

Concrete Walks.

We are glad to note that so many of our citizens are putting down the Concrete Pavement. We believe it will be serviceable, and give the best of satisfaction. The longest piece in the city is now being laid in the block between Fifth and Sixth streets, on the south side. We shall expect to see more of it put down as soon as its durability is tested.

The Musical Soiree and Reading.

The Association rooms were crowded to their utmost capacity last evening. Every seat and corner was occupied long before the hour for the exercises to commence. The singing and music was extremely fine, while the readings of Miss KATE M. THOMAS were received in the same manner they always are. Everybody was pleased and are to-day talking of nothing else but the soiree. It was creditable to all interested in it.

Had Boys.

Officer REYNOLDS last night arrested a quartette of lads who loiter about the Hudson River Railroad Depot, and greatly annoy those who are engaged there, as well as those in wait for the train. The complaint was made by Ticket Agent BUMP, and the boys were arrested and taken before Justice STORM, and to-day fined three dollars each. They plead guilty. We hope this step will break up the nuisance.

Looking Dull.

Business at the docks is dull since the day boats have been pulled off the route, and trade along the wharves begins to "look blue in the face." This is always so at this season of the year, after the summer travel is closed. There is considerable stir in the freights, and we never knew a season when so many potatoes were shipped from this country. They are bringing good prices and the field has been extremely fine.

Bully Benton.

A man who gave his name as Joseph Weisell, came into this city this morning so badly beaten as to be disfigured. He stated that while a short distance from Hudson, on the road leading to Stockport, he was met last night by two men in a buggy, who stopped and asked him for a chew of tobacco. He stepped up to the carriage to hand it to them, when one of the men struck him with a loaded whip. He was not protected by the blow, but gave an alarm, when both of the villains jumped from the carriage and grabbed him by the throat, and pounded him until he was unconscious. He has no idea of what happened afterward, except that he found himself about midnight lying in the road, unable to scarcely move. He at once called, and sought shelter in an outbuilding until daylight. No attempt was made to rob him by the rascals, who were probably frightened off before accomplishing their aim. He was on his way to Rhinebeck, where he has friends. A more inhuman beating a man never received.

From Our Special Reporter. THE RONDOUT TRAGEDY!

Testimony before the Coroner's Inquest.

A BLOODY CHAPTER IN THE LIFE OF A HUMAN FIEND!

At the Coroner's inquest in the Rondout tragedy, held yesterday, at the office of JOSHUA DUDON, Rondout, the following evidence was taken. Evidence in relation to the letter supposed to have been sent to Wood, was not admitted by the Coroner, who contended it was irrelevant. The letter left by the murderer was not read before the Jury, but was placed in their hands. It is not published here, because it is too illegible to translate into connected sentences, and what little can be read is too indecent for the public eye. The evidence as taken in full by our special reporter, is given below:

ELIAKIM WARDELL, sworn, testified: I live in Dutchess County, town of Poughkeepsie, and am the father of Maria Wardell; have not seen her since the killing; she is the wife of Joseph Wood, and is twenty-eight years old; she has been married four years, I believe, and has three children; only one, a boy, is now living; she was stayed to my house about two weeks ago and stayed one week; never heard her complain about her treatment by her husband; she said "they might talk as they pleased, but he always used her well."

JAMES WOOD, sworn, testified: I live one door this side of the place, and have been acquainted with Joseph Wood a number of years; he used to be quite a wild, reckless kind of a fellow when he was a young man; when he got married I had not seen him for some eight or ten years, he being away that time, and returning at the conclusion of the war; I saw Wood, I suppose it must have been five o'clock, in my place, Saturday morning; he came into my store and said to me: "How much is my bill?" I told him I had not looked it over; I was waiting on a customer, and when he went out I said to him, "I have time now," and I looked at the bill and found it was $5 75; he said: "That is just about what I expected it would be; am going up the canal, I have sold my lot in Sleightsburgh, and my wife has the money and will call around and pay you." He then said: "Will you lend me your pen and ink?" I told him I would; I told him not to keep it long as it was the only one I had; this was in the afternoon.

Witness then testified to going after the pen and finding Wood writing. Witness asked whether he had done, and Wood replied: "No, wait a few minutes." Nobody being at the store witness returned. In a few minutes Wood returned with the ink, and afterwards the pen. He was perfectly sober, and said he hadn't drank a drop of liquor for a week.

In the afternoon Mr. Raymond came into my place and Wood came in, and they both sat there from about one to five o'clock. I sat there and Mr. King came in—Mr. Cyrus King—and Wood says: "Will you have a drink of beer?" He said he didn't care and took a drink. Says Joe: "I have not drank anything in a week, and I will take a glass of sarsaparilla," and he took a drink of that on Raymond. There was a stool sitting there and he came to it, and looked me in the face. I said: "Joe, I think you are brooding over something terrible; I wish I knew what it is, for I don't see what cause you have for trouble." He turned it off by asking the price of some socks, and he bought them. His face had looked gloomy since Monday morning. On Monday morning he said he was going after his wife Raymond, and he left together; I think he came back, I understood about supper time, to get some kerosene. After supper I was waiting on customers, and I was in the back part of the house, when Mrs. Grimes cried to me to come there, if I pleased, "for Joseph Wood is killing his wife." I went to the other end of the store, and I asked him to go and see what was the matter as quick as he could; William Van Keuren came in and we ran to the place; Wardell was there, and I asked why he didn't go in, and he said that was the matter; he said the door was locked; we went to the back shutter, and I did not see a soul there. While I was looking through the shutter, Metcalf's folks came up; Metcalf was looking in the shutter, when some one said: "Let us burst open the door." We went to the door, and somebody turned the knob and opened it. There was his wife all mangled near the door, right by the lounge; Wood was walking with his back towards me; what he had I could not tell; he advanced toward us, and I backed out; I didn't know but he had some weapon, and I wanted some assistance and I went to the shop. There was nobody who would come, and I went back and then Joe was about dead; the head of the woman was toward the door; he said nothing when we opened the door; there was no noise when I got there.

LEVI METCALF, sworn, testified: I live right by Wood's house, and have been pretty well acquainted with them. I saw Joseph Wood every two days; I have not had much conversation with him, except on Saturday; I saw nothing unusual about him. He promised to do some work for me. I said I was expecting him. In the evening I heard the cry of "Murder" and somebody said "Joseph Wood is killing his wife." I was eating my supper when my folks heard it. I started for the place, though my wife was out first. My wife was on the walk, and when I got there, I saw nobody in the house, and I spoke quite loud and asked: "What is the matter in the house?" I then said: "Joe Wood, open this door," and he did. He went right back and I followed him into the house. As I passed by the door I saw his wife lying down. There was a light in the room on the stand.

Says I, "Joe Wood, what under heavens have you been doing? You have murdered your wife" and I kept talking to him, and he went toward the door and the bedroom; he kinder turned around and I kept talking, and said "It is a horrible thing." He had no weapon when I first saw him; he walked into the bed-room, and lifting up his hands he fell upon his face upon the floor. I went to see if the woman was dead, and turning around, thinking Joe was quiet a moment, I examined her; while I was looking to see whether she was living or dead, he got up from the floor and went toward the bed-room door, and picked something from the floor, supposed to be a knife; then he turned around to me holding a razor in his hand; he tried to cut his throat, when I stopped him; then he tried to do it a second time, and I stopped him again; then he came towards me with the razor, and I thought it was getting very dangerous, and went to the door to call for help; nobody was around; I was about a minute out, and when I came back he was laying on his face, his throat cut from ear to ear; his child was lying in the bed room on the bed.

STEPHEN WARDELL testified—I saw Wood in a store about three o'clock, leaning with his head on his hand, on the counter. I stepped up to him and took him by the collar, and I said: "Joe, what is the matter? You are either in trouble or something is the matter?" He said: "Nothing! nothing!" I said: "Joe, I know better, I would like to know what it is." He said: "Nothing, only I am sick." [The witness then related the circumstances of the murder, but added no new facts.

MR. METCALF recalled, stated that the razor was by his right side when he was lying upon the floor.

LEWIS CROSSMAN, sworn and testified—I am acquainted with Wood. On Saturday morning about 10 o'clock he came into the Ferry house, and asked me how much he owed me; I told him and he paid it. Said I, "Joe, what is the matter with you?" "Nothing," he said. I said "There is something the matter," and he said "No, there ain't." I told him I was afraid he was going to do something desperate.

DR. GEORGE C. SMITH, sworn, testified that the wounds on the face of Maria Wood were thirteen in number, all of which were gashes made by some blunt instrument. Any one of seven of them would have caused death, if inflicted separate. The wound of Wood was made by a razor, and began one inch below the right ear, and extended to the left ear, cutting deep.

DR. ABRAHAM CRISPILL confirmed the testimony given by Mr. Smith in relation to the wound.

The Jury rendered a verdict in accordance with the testimony here given, and the inquest then adjourned.

The letter left by Wood, as near as it could be made out, contained statements charging upon his wife criminal intercourse with certain citizens of Rondout. The vilest of language was used in its expression, so vile, in fact, that the Coroner ordered it to be given to the Jury without reading it in open Court. It expressed great affection for the little boy George, and asked that somebody take care of him, and declared that himself and his wife must die. He would have their blood, and hoped there would be no place horrible enough to contain the supposed destroyers of his peace. He said in one part of the letter some people in Newburgh were the cause of it, and again expresses love for his parents, who live in that city.

The letter shows the hand-work of an inflamed and disordered imagination, containing, as it does, apparently contradictory statements, vile accusations, and a share of those nobler sentiments which express what is good in the most wicked. Some blood-marks are upon the letter. The evidence indicates when the letter was written.

The Great Menagerie To-morrow.

In the morning at 10 o'clock, the great street Pageant of Van Amburgh & Co's Golden Menagerie, will pass through the principal streets and will be one of the most brilliant and interesting sights ever seen in Hudson. At the close of the parade the large living lion which will be carried loose through the streets, on the summit of the great Golden Chariot of Cleopatra, will be transferred back to his den in the presence of the public, on the outside of the canvas at the exhibition ground.

The doors will be open for the afternoon exhibition at 1 o'clock, P. M., and in the evening at seven.

We cannot add anything to that which we have already said regarding this exceedingly popular and attractive exhibition, further than to advise everybody who wishes to spend a pleasant afternoon or evening, blending amusement with instruction, to attend, and above all things to take the children. Remember the first time you saw an elephant, Oh Pater Familias! and the wild joy of that occasion, and act and govern yourself accordingly.

A New Uniform.

We were shown at the house of Evans Hook and Ladder Company yesterday, the new uniform adopted by the company. The hat is of the usual fire style, painted red, with white front piece properly lettered. The shirt is of white flannel, with a shield on the breast upon which is tastefully wrought hooks and ladders, with figure three beneath. The belt is red patent leather, lined with white, and handsomely lettered. The uniform is neat and handsome.

The Musical Wonder.

The entertainment of Prof. IRELAND, at the Rooms of the Young Men's Christian Association this evening, should bring out a large audience. The occasion is one to which all can afford to contribute.
