Middlebrook students set to play with Westport Community Band

MIDDLEBROOK students will be joining the Westport Community Band in the play. With the Community Band project for a concert on Jan. 16 at the Middlebrook School. Melissa Reiter and Morgan Flanagan will be playing the flute; Iffie Keppeler, Erika Ashley, Andrew Kostic and Courtney Twenty will play clarinet; Megan McCarthy will play oboe. Emily Adams will play trombone, and Jake Walker and Michael Pastor will play trumpet.

"We look forward to this event every year," said Charles Charle, president of the Westport Community Band, "Band members enjoy having an opportunity to play with the young people, and we feel that having our students work with both their peers from other schools, and adults provides a unique learning experience. More than 150 students will participate in the concert, and feedback from the students, their teachers and parents is uniformly positive." The band works with local middle school students to play the program. The event is underwritten by a grant from CBS Weathers and supported by the Westport Schools Fine Arts Department.
