Miss Gertrude Herdle, director of the Memorial Art Gallery, returned recently from Europe where she has been studying in the great galleries and gathering material for use in lectures at the Memorial Art Gallery this winter.

Art Director Returns From Summer Abroad Finds the Modernistic Art Exhibition Interesting

The American museum is relatively poorer in content than the European, but it is more accurately entrenched as a civic project, asserts Miss Gertrude Herdle, director of the Memorial Art Gallery, who has recently returned from Europe where she has visited and studied both the large national museums and the provincial galleries. "The European and the American approaches to art are collecting very different," she declared in an interview yesterday. "The continental collections are for the most part, privately gathered and show no general accession plan. There are great masses allowing a good many lesser lights. Our galleries are certainly poorer in general content, but we have developed them as community projects in a way which the European is only now coming to appreciate. "This year we were especially interested in gaining admittance to several smaller galleries such as those at Angers and Poitiers. We literally had to beg our way past three locked doors and then the collectors pursued us jealously from picture to picture with suspicious vigilance. "While the ability of the American art dealer to bid on more than even terms with other collectors, does mean that there is an increasing exodus of great pictures to America, the Yankee dealer is not the most popular person in the world Miss Herdle states. Some old Cotswold cottages were for sale this summer and an American collector was planning to demolish them and rebuild them in this country for display purposes. The residents of surrounding English towns were so incensed that they actually started a subscription to purchase the houses themselves. Previously they had regarded them as so many places to live, and nothing to use for museum purposes. "While Miss Herdle spent a good deal of time collecting material for lecture work at the Art Gallery, visiting the great national galleries, she describes the exhibition of modernistic work in Paris and the display of French Gothic tapestries as the highlights of a meteoric trip. "After seeing these tapestries which are probably the height in medieval craftsmanship in their purity and majesty, it is a bit of a shock to turn to the ultra-sophisticated, self-conscious work of the moderns. I suppose it is a mistake to call it a movement because it is too obviously a fact to be held lightly. For absolute sincerity and excellent craftsmanship it can hardly be equalled, although there will always be a good many who find little repose or beauty in it. "Miss Herdle did see the modernistic street in Paris built by the American architect, Mallet Stevens, and confesses to all the thrills one feels in the presence of a new presentation of a familiar subject. Several almost as yet in appearance, the houses are unrelieved save for the design in the placing of doors and windows. Now and again one observes a playful touch in the treatment of a veranda or a staircase. "In Italy Miss Herdle asserts it is not only more expensive to visit the galleries but next to impossible to make any purchases since Mussolini had learned to treat art as one of the national assets of the country.

Hungerford—Walker
The marriage of Miss Ethel Walker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick H. Walker of Lauriston Road and Walter J. Hungerford, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Arthur Hungerford of Auburn, took place on Tuesday morning at the Blessed Sacrament Church. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Thomas F. Connor. Miss Ruth Walker, sister of the bride, was the bridesmaid and Edwina Hungerford, brother of the bridegroom, was the best man. After the ceremony, a wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride. Mr. and Mrs. Hungerford left on a two weeks motor trip. After Oct. 1 they will live at No. 60 Chestnut Place, Auburn.

Mrs. Norton First Member of Feminine Contingent in Congress to Bob Her Hair

By MANINE DAVIS
New York, Sept. 24.—(By Capital News)—The Congressional guests will have a little surprise when they convene in December. Mary T. Norton, Democratic congresswoman from New Jersey, has bobbed her hair. Not only has she of the past or present members succumbed to this particular mode, but none of the other women who will probably be elected, including Ruth Hanna McCormick, Ruth Bryan Owen, Ruth Pratt or Agnes Wilson have bobs of any description. No congresswoman has even been caught smoking in the Speaker's lobby as yet, but obviously women never cease! Miss Herdle did see the modernistic street in Paris built by the American architect, Mallet Stevens, and confesses to all the thrills one feels in the presence of a new presentation of a familiar subject. Several almost as yet in appearance, the houses are unrelieved save for the design in the placing of doors and windows. Now and again one observes a playful touch in the treatment of a veranda or a staircase. "In Italy Miss Herdle asserts it is not only more expensive to visit the galleries but next to impossible to make any purchases since Mussolini had learned to treat art as one of the national assets of the country.

Such Sandwiches.. how do you get them so thin?

It's mighty nice to have nice guests compliment your sandwiches... and they'll do it every time when you make them with this slo-baked bread. Women who use it tell us there's no other bread quite like it. Note that slices quite so thin... or taste so deliciously delicious.

That's what guests say when you serve this remarkable bread. This advertisement explains the reasons in detail.

You see, every loaf of Wonder Bread is slo-baked. That's the only way we can secure that delicate freshness everyone likes so much in bread. And then, too, we take great care to get the very best ingredients. Specially selected flour made from the unusual quality of the wheat berry. Double the usual quantity of milk. So, Madam, no matter how well you like your present bread, we believe you'll be wise to give Wonder Bread a thorough trial. Try it for toast and sandwiches... see how thin you can slice it! See how delicate it is.

Remove powder and rouge each night by soap made of these precious beauty oils

"Just soap and water" is the best advice for women who want modern rules for skin care. But not just any soap. For beauty is too precious to risk. The soap should be a complexion soap—a soap made for just that, and nothing else. For natural charm is the urge today. And natural charm comes from natural methods. The natural beautifiers in Palmolive Soap are the rich beautifiers of olive and palm oils, famed for centuries. These soothing, unguent oils in its rich lather are largely responsible for the beautiful complexions you see wherever you look. Wash your face gently with soothing Palmolive. With your two hands massage its luxurious lather abundantly into the skin, cleansing it thoroughly, opening the pores. Then rinse, first with warm, then with cold water. Dry by patting with a soft towel. That is all. A dash of cold cream if skin is dry. Today get Palmolive, Colgate-Palmolive-Peet Co., Chicago, Ill.
