Auburn, Monday Eve., Nov. 5, 1860.

FOR THE LAST TIME.

REPUBLICANS ATTENTION!!

Grand Rally at Corning Hall To-Night.

Speech by Gov. Seward.

Republicans Assemble for the Last Council Before the Coming Victory.

CONSULT TO-NIGHT—TO-MORROW VOTE.

Grand Wide-Awake Display.

ORDER OF ARRANGEMENTS.

In accordance with his custom for several years, our distinguished and much-loved townsman, William H. Seward, will address the citizens of Auburn upon the political issues of the day, at Corning Hall, to-night—the eve of the election. LET EVERY FREEDOM-LOVING CITIZEN OF THIS PLACE BE PRESENT.

THE WIDE AWAKES of the city will assemble at the Depot this evening, for the purpose of meeting Sutherland's Band, of Syracuse, which will arrive in the 6:50 train from the East; after which, headed by the Band, they will march by the way of William street to the residence of Governor Seward, and escort him to Corning Hall. They will then stack their torches in the ante-rooms, and remain in attendance at the Hall during the delivery of the speech. We wish it distinctly understood, that there will be no Wide Awake display during the speaking. At the conclusion of the exercises at the Hall, the Wide Awakes will again form and escort the Governor to his home, after which they will make a public parade through the principal streets of the city.

A NEW CARRIAGE.—Robert White Esq., of this city, has just completed a family carriage for David Bower, Esq., of Springport. It is one of the finest achievments of Auburn machanism we have seen for many a day, and is superior to anything we ever saw manufactured at the east. It reminded us forcibly of the Parson's "One horse shay;" for every portion of it was made from the very best material, and in the most workmanlike manner. We should not be surprised if the great grand children of Mr. Bower should ride in it, provided balloons and lightning do not by that time take the place of horses. Mr. Bowes expresses himself as highly pleased with it, and feels much better contented with his purchase than if it had been made of an eastern manufacturer who would care less for its durability than a mechanic who can be easily reached, and who will be obliged to see his work pass before him every few days.—The triming is the work of Mr. James H. Hoskins, and stamps him as an adept at his business.

A NEW FENCE.—Mr. D. L. Halsey, of Victory, is engaged in cultivating what is called the Osier Willow. It is very prolific, and yields three tons to the acre. It is very valuable for two purposes, viz., as a hedge and for basket making. It is said to be superior to all other hedges, and will be sufficiently stout at the end of three years from the time of setting out, to turn cattle. One hundred and forty dollars per ton is the market price for the clippings, and as it grows very rapidly, yielding as above stated, it makes a very profitable fence. Farmers who desire to make every inch of land pay, will send in their orders to Mr. Halsey at once.

ACCIDENT.—We learn from the Cayuga Lake Recorder, that Messrs. Angel, Forsting, Southworth and Jacobs of Union Springs, came very near losing their lives by the capsizing of a sail boat on Cayuga Lake last Friday. Some of the running rigging gave way, and Mr. Forsting went aloft for the purpose of arranging it, when his weight proved too much for the boat, which was struck by a sudden squall, and it was capsized in an instant. The unlucky persons clung to the boat, and in the course of a few minutes were rescued by Mr. M. C. Simons, and several other gentlemen.

A. Y. M. A.—The regular meeting of the Board of Directors (this evening) is hereby adjourned to meet at the Association rooms on Thursday evening the 8th inst., at 8 o'clock P. M. By Order of the President.
R. T. PAYNE, Cor. Sec'y.

The regular monthly meeting of the Association is hereby adjourned to Wednesday evening the 14th inst., at 8 o'clock P. M.
By Order of the President.
R. T. PAYNE, Cor. Sec'y.

UNFORTUNATE.—Our friends of the Democrat have been unfortunate. A large tank which they have in the upper portion of the building, for the purpose of holding water to supply their engine, gave way early yesterday morning, flooding their compositors' room and the Post Office beneath. A large quantity of mail matter was badly wet, and considerable damage done the printing office.

TO THE PUBLIC.—Mr. Warriner, the telegraph operator of this city, has received instructions not to do any business after six o'clock P. M., on the day of election. This order has been issued that the operators along the line may be undisturbed while receiving election returns. No person beside the operator and copyists will be allowed to enter the office after the returns commence to arrive.

NEW BOOKS.—Messrs. J. E. Tilton & Co., of Boston, have in press and will soon publish "Quiet Thoughts for Quiet Homes," by the author of "Life's Morning" "Life's Evening," &c, &c., and "The Chapel of St Mary," by the author of "The Rectory of Moreland."

SURPRISE.—On Friday evening last the parishioners of the Rev. E. Smith of Springport made him a surprise visit. It was an occasion of much pleasure.

TO VOCALISTS, SPEAKERS, &c.—As your voice and lungs are much taxed, and often get out of order, by coughs, colds, &c., try a box of Bryan's Pulmonic Wafers, only 25 cents a box. Sold by all druggists.

To the People of Ireland.

AUBURN, Sept. 10, 1860.

FELLOW COUNTRYMEN.—I arrived on last Tuesday in this beautiful town of about thirteen thousand inhabitants. It is distant from New York about three hundred miles, and it is surrounded by one of the most flourishing agricultural districts in the entire Union.—The line of railroad from Rochester to this place (about eighty miles) lies through rich pastures, luxuriant meadow land, and through endless corn fields; interspersed here and there with orchards, gardens, and the varied fruit productions of the country. I passed several neat, prosperous towns of, perhaps, two, three, or four thousand population, as the case may be; and the streets, the houses, and the people all bearing unmistakable testimony to the comforts and independence of the districts. Some lakes, too, appeared along the road, proving a fact already noticed by me—namely, that the loose sand or the baked sand (sandstone,) east of the Alleganies, receiving from the water sheds of these mountains their multitudinous floods of rain, absorb and sift and filtrate the water, till in some favorable natural sunk basins, these floods burst from their subterranean channels, and present in one deep, wide-flooded territory the lake development

I can do nothing in the States for some months to come From the present time till about the middle of November, nothing will be thought of, spoken of, written, or done in the entire Union except the all-absorbing topic and ubiquitous preparations for the election of the American President. The universal press, the universal platform, and the universal population—men, women, and children—are all engaged, day and night, in this sleepless hum, unceasing work of the Republican election. Torch-light processions, every man carrying, at 10 o'clock at night, a torch on the top of a pole, parade the streets; bands of exquisite German music accompany about every two or three hundred of the processionists; the most perfect order is observed on the line of march, moving in double or single lines according to their numbers; and the whole mass, perhaps of eight or ten thousand men, thus walking in these parallel lines of waving nodding flambeaus; keeping a measured military tramp, and going in perfect silence, only broken by the inspiriting marshal airs, is, without doubt, one of the most thrilling, and appalling, and heart moving, and soul-stirring and stupenduously suggestive scenes, and spectacles which could be presented to the imagination and eye of a stranger. Not a shout was raised through the streets; the cheers are reserved for the finale of the procession.

Not a broken head or a black eye have I heard of as yet from these blazing patriotic meetings: these silent musical assemblages. It is all law—all order—all temperance, as far as I have yet learned; and every citizen, every voter, who joins in these processions in order to elect the head of the Constitution, to nominate the essential main spring of the administration, exhibits, in his own bearing and conduct, the same legal, sober, temperate, constitutional feeling which he hopes to see realized on a large scale, and concentrated in the venerable, exalted individual consecrated by the nation's free choice. It is surprising how ardently men support the constitution by which they are impartially protected; how honestly they observe the laws which bring security and liberty to their own fire-sides, and how affectionately they revere the supreme head, which wields power and dispenses favors for the universal public good. What a contrast, so far as I have observed it, between this country and the unhappy Nation where the laws are conceived in a spirit of religious persecution, where they are framed in penal exclusion—and where they are administered to the weak in ferocious instinct and in sanguinary malice. Oh! Lord, what a fate! what a wretched race! what bleeding slavery!

I have met in this town an unusually large number of Irish, proportionably to the American population of the place. And again, I do not remember to have seen anywhere else in this country, so many persons from the immediate neighborhood where I was born. The Queen's county, the county Carlow, and the county Kildare, have sent hundreds of emigrants to this town and county. The town of Carlow and of Castledermot, and the villages of Levitstown, of Magenny and Killeen, have shipped to Auburn a numerous congregation of good edifying Catholics; and moreover, they are all independent in the world—some few of them with hundreds of dollars saved; and one of them with at least ten thousand dollars! The poor fellows never left me, I may say, day or night, since I came here. I asked them if they wished that I should send home their compliments and love to their friends; and they drew up the following list of names, which I transcribe in my present letter:

COUNTY KILDARE.

Daniel Dowling, James Lawler, Thomas Timens, James Farrel, John M'Donnell, James M'Donald, Michael Kelly, Castlerow. Michael Murrey, Maurice Murphy, Edward Murphy, James Murphy, Patrick Neal, Davidstown. James Wall, Patrick Murphy, Newton. James Galvin, Kilkea. James Hennessey, Patrick Doyle, Levitstown. Patrick Kinsella, Terrence Kinsella, Thomas Neal, John Neal, James Casey, Patrick Casey, Kilkea.

COUNTY CARLOW.

Patrick Dunne, Laurence Dunne, James Doyle, Dennis Doyle, Rathvilly.

Old men and women, young girls, young men and children—in fact, three generations came to me here, to see their countryman, their townsman, or their county-man, asking me ten thousand questions about home, and sending through this letter their Irish, warm remembrances and affections to their relatives in Ireland. If I put them all down in print, the entire paper would be covered with their names. The cause of this large number coming here from the same place has arisen from the fact of the first emigrants being singularly successful; and three whole parishes sailed in their lucky track. This reason is further strengthened when one adds to this fact the additional circumstances, namely, the forced depopulation of several parts of the county Kildare; and the wholesale extermination of the county Carlow. I could not, indeed resist my own desire and their wishes of sending home this package of Irish love to my own Leinster and my own parish; and this too, as warmly as an American pen and ink can convey it, from my ardent feelings.

I cannot conclude this section of my letter without devoting a little paragraph to sentiments which will be well received in Ireland. In my conversation with these respectable Irishmen—of Auburn—I was delighted with the concurrent testimony which they all bore to the kindness of their American employers. Several of these my townsmen assured me that it was no uncommon favor for an American gentleman or farmer, to send his horse and buggy with his Catholic servants (helps) to the next town, in order to hear mass, when the church or chapel would be at a distance from his residence; and others, also, told me that in all positions, where they held office in government situations, the superiors or heads of the departments evinced a lively interest and a friendly regard toward the Irish subalterns placed under their control. I think it right to make these observations to prove the gratitude of my countrymen toward the Americans who treat them with respect and kindness And I shall say that if the true American gentleman be proverbially kind, the true Irishman is equally proverbially grateful.

I visited the State Prison of Auburn.—There are, I think, three State Prisons in the State of New York, namely, Sing Sing, Auburn, and Clinton. There were in this one prison, eight hundred and fifty convicts, their term of imprisonment varying from one year to the period of their whole lives. They were principally young men from all nations which inhabit this country; that is, Dutch, French, German, English, Irish, American—On comparing the statistics of comparative crime, I was glad to see that the native born Irish presented a favorable comparison in the scale of prison crime. Considering their number in the State, their crimes were under the general rate of the population. This was always my unproved opinion; and I was of course rejoiced to behold the palpable reality of my former mere suppositions. The whole house, that is, all the inmates, were working at numerous trades. The experienced convict tradesman working with skill and expedition—the learned doing some part of the craft suited to his advancement—all were employed. I noticed smiths, tailors, carpenters, coopers, cabinet makers, agricultural machine-makers iron machinists, shoemakers, tool makers, silver-platers, rug and carpet weavers, spinners, dyers painters polishers—and in fact, every description of tradesman known in America. Their various shops were lofty, well ventilated, clean, and planned and built on the best modern scientific principles of light and air. Perfect silence is maintained in all places and at all times, under severe immediate punishment; and this regulation prevents the young, comparatively innocent convict from learning the vice of the old hardened culprit. In fact, they can only speak to the foremen of the various trades and learn their trade. The poor Irish unfortunate fellows could only give one long melancholy look at me as I passed.

If any man execute his allotted work sooner than the foreman has appointed, the convict can spend the remaining day in working for himself,—and there are instances where the wretched man has, after a term of five or seven years, left the prison with one or two hundred dollars of his earnings in his pocket. He re-enters society with a good trade, an improved morality, a lesson of bitter experience, and is frequently an edifying member of the human family. They eat meat twice a day. I saw their dinner laid, and it is hard to say whether the wisdom or the humanity, or the Christianity of the State law has the mastery in the admirable discipline of these institutions.

Your faithful, devoted countryman,
D. W. CAHILL.

The Song of the Democracy.

Capital should own labor.—Fusion Candidate for V. President.

In the south we own labor, as silver or gold,
And wield a vast power in the land;
All laborers, tho' white, should be owned, bot and sold,
And we'll put on them yet our slave-brand!
For the laborer is part of the rich man's wealth,
And must by the rich man be owned.
If the south would succeed by loud threats or by stealth,
On the necks of the North we're enthroned!
Fusion Ticket!—working men, go it blind! Go it blind!
We will give you strong shackles for your toil;
Our chains on your children forever we'll bind,
And their labor make ever our spoil.

COW ESTRAY OR STOLEN.—The subscriber's cow strayed or was stolen from his barn-yard, on William street, last Thursday night. She is of red color, with some white about her flanks and udder, of medium size, and wears a small round bell attached to her neck with a leather strap.—Whoever will return her to the subscriber, or inform him of her whereabouts, will confer a favor upon him, and be liberally rewarded. Littlefield's
Railway Coal Burner.

AFTER years of patient study, investigation and experiment in Coal Burning and Coal Stoves, Mr. Littlefield brought his ideas to perfection in the celebrated Rail Way Coal Burner.
And, it is to this Stove that we desire to call the particular attention of all who use, or intend to use coal, as one superior in all respects to any heating stove now made. Got up on scientific principles, it is ECONOMICAL AS A CONSUMER, and

POWERFUL AS A HEATER.
Free from Brick Linings,
IT IS
FREE FROM CLINKER—

A Perpetual Burner,

Coal need not be put in more than once in twenty-four hours and the fire will BURN from FALL to SPRING without rekindling.
Beautiful and ornamental, convenient and durable, it is all we claim it to be. It will bear examination—call and see it. It will please you; take one and try it—you will like it, you will buy it for it is more Ornamental—it is more durable—it is more economical and therefore cheaper than any Stove in market.
