Mrs. Frank Keller, who resides on the outskirts of the village, was formerly a member of the Methodist parsonage circle. She was in attendance at the prayer meeting on Tuesday, October 27th, and later in the evening at the assembly meeting. Mrs. Keller was formerly a member of the parsonage circle and is noted for her active and zealous participation in the activities of the church.

Geo. E. Tunnicliff, Clement Huyck, and Geo. Shoudy, who are prominent figures in the agricultural community, are anxious to compile a comprehensive list of farm equipment and machinery. They plan to attend the business college in a few weeks and are determined to put in the study of the subject with the utmost zeal.

The death of Addie U. Steele was announced yesterday. The deceased had been working as an employee of the Mutual Life Insurance Company for several months after which he was transferred to this office. The funeral was held yesterday afternoon with Rev. Claude Soares officiating.

The news of the flu outbreak in the village has spread rapidly and has caused great concern among the residents. The doctors have been kept busy examining patients and making diagnoses. The village has been placed under quarantine and all infected persons have been isolated.

Local interest is centered chiefly in the politics of the area. The Republican and Prohibition candidates are leading in the polls, and the battle is expected to be a close one. There is a strong sentiment for the return of the federal system, and Mr. Trump is expected to make a strong showing in the elections.

Our thanks and deep appreciation to our friends for their kind hospitality and for the many presents they have sent on application. We are proud of this record and are confident that the village will continue to prosper and develop under the leadership of our capable citizens.
