THE POST-STAR, GLENS FALLS, N. Y., WEDNESDAY, MARCH 14, 1951

To Music Lovers

To the Editor of THE POST-STAR:

Your May 30, 1950 letter asserting that the choir at the Glens Falls High School should perform at the Strand Theatre twice a week was a very ill-considered one.

It is an obvious fact, that the choir cannot possibly make two appearances in one week. With the strain of performing their regular schedule, the choir is already overworked and has little energy left.

Yours truly,

Walter Winchell

On Broadway

On the New Musical "El Gato con Sombrero"

The new musical "El Gato con Sombrero" is one of the most promising new shows to open on Broadway this season. The show, which opened on March 12, 1951, at the Shubert Theater, is a Latin-flavored musical comedy that has already received critical acclaim.

The story centers around a group of Latin Americans living in New York City. The show features a score by the famous composer Leonard Bernstein, and is directed by the renowned director George Abbott.

The cast includes such prominent Broadway actors as Mario Moreno, who plays the title role of "El Gato," and Betty Buckley, who plays the role of "La Primera." The show has received positive reviews for its catchy music, lively performances, and engaging storyline.

It is hoped that "El Gato con Sombrero" will become a long-running success and bring new life to the Broadway stage.

Yours truly,

Rita Moreno

"Unenlightened"

In response to the letter published in THE POST-STAR on March 12, 1951, regarding the importance of music education, I must respectfully disagree. While music education is certainly valuable, it cannot be considered a substitute for the study of history and science.

History and science provide the foundation for understanding the world around us. With a strong understanding of these subjects, we can make informed decisions and contribute to the betterment of society. Music, on the other hand, is a personal art form and cannot be universally applied.

Yours truly,

Alexander Hamilton

Take My Word for It

"Great Expectations" is a classic novel by Charles Dickens that has captured the imaginations of readers for over 150 years. The story follows the life of the young orphan, Pip, as he navigates the complexities of Victorian society.

Pip is a character who has been both loved and hated by readers, but his journey is one that resonates with all who have faced adversity. "Great Expectations" is a timeless tale that continues to be relevant today.

Today's Talk

In today's world, we are continuously faced with challenges and obstacles. Whether it is personal or professional, we must learn to overcome these difficulties and emerge stronger.

One way to achieve this is by setting clear goals and working towards them. By setting specific goals, we can measure our progress and adjust our strategies as needed. This will help us stay focused and motivated in achieving our objectives.

Yours truly,

George Matthews

The Trouble With American Aid

In commenting here yesterday on proposals by President Truman's International Development Advisory Board for the establishment of various American agencies and organizations to assure a minimum level of living in backward areas, the writer expressed the belief that such an approach would result in more efficient and effective use of American aid.

The writer also expressed the hope that the United States government would continue to support the efforts of the United Nations and its agencies in promoting the development of underdeveloped areas.

Yours truly,

William H. Rice
