Asian Action

A Chinese student at the University of Kansas has died from a hunting accident in the state. The student, who was hiking in the woods with a group of friends, was shot and killed by a stray bullet from a hunting rifle. The university said the student was a well-respected member of the community and had plans to pursue a career in engineering. The school has launched an investigation to determine the circumstances of the accident.

Can't Be 'Change'?

Pennsylvania's chief justice recently ruled that a law allowing for the sale of tobacco to minors is unconstitutional. The ruling comes after a series of court cases involving minors under the age of 18 who have been arrested for smoking. The justice said the law is an attempt to change the law itself and that it cannot be done without legislative action.
